Harmony Seminary,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THE annual vacation of one month will expire and the Seminary will be re-opened on the first day of September.

No pains or expense have been spared to render this institution as desirable as any in the United States for the education of Young Ladies.—It will be under the care of the rev. A. D. Campbell, pastor of the church, who will occasionally, deliver lectures on Rhetoric and History. The various other branches of English Literature, will be confided to a gentleman, whom an experience of twenty years in some of the first schools in the United States, has amply qualified for the task. A young lady who studied under the best teachers in London, has lately arrived for the express purpose of giving instructions in Music and the French Language. The board, washing and hours of recreation are under the eye of a careful Matron; and it is the determination of those concerned in the School, that nothing shall be wanting that industry, talents and attention can accomplish, to improve the minds of the pupils, to render their deportment pleasing, and their dispositions amiable.

THE TERMS ARE,

For tuition in the English and French languages, Geography, History, Rhetoric, Composition, Drawing Maps, Writing, Arithmetic, and board and washing $150 per annum. For Music, an extra charge of $6 per quarter, and the stationary that the pupils require will be furnished at the lowest price.

$200 Reward.

RANAWAY from the subscriber on the 14th of July, a NEGRO man named FELT, aged between 30 and 35 years of age, dark complexion, about five feet 8 or 10 inches high—when spoken to has a down cast look, & speaks quick, walks with his toes out, he wore off a long tailed blue cloth coat and blue pantaloons, and other clothing not known. He is a Tanner & Currier by trade, and when at work has a remarkable brisk motion, being a first rate workman. It is probable he will make for the state of Ohio, and has, no doubt, procured a free pass, and will attempt to pass for a free man; he can read and write tolerably well. Should he succeed in getting to the state of Ohio, he will probably attempt to get work as a tanner. The above reward will be given if taken in the state of Ohio or Indiana, and all reasonable charges paid on delivery, or fifty dollars if taken in Kentucky or Virginia. He may possibly attempt to get to Madison county, Virginia, as I brought him from there about two years ago.

AT a large and respectable meeting of the citizens of Pittsburgh, convened at the house of J. B. NO. VI.

And Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. DAN. I. XVII.

DANIEL was certainly a most fortunate man. We are apt at the present day to conceive that person to be wise, who can truly interpret those actions of his fellow men which fall directly within his own observation. Indeed, there are a thousand important events passing daily under our very noses, of which we are entirely unconscious; and we hourly observe actions of which we can neither conceive the motive, nor foresee the consequences. The weakness and fallibility of human nature are such, that scarcely a day passes without affording some striking instance of the one or of the other. We have seen generals renowned for genius, courage and perseverance, falling a prey to despair, and exhibiting traits of pusillanimity as striking as their former greatness. Wise men have committed follies which we should have ridiculed in an idiot, and have pitied in a madman.—History affords us instances of justice and generosity in weak and cruel tyrants, while on the other hand it presents a picture of black oppression, sanctioned by patriots and borne by freemen. We have found pride, asperity and resentment, in the divine who preached humility and brotherly love; while we have known the choicest virtues to be practised by men whose lives and principles we could not but condemn. Thus wild, thus eccentric, thus changeful is the human heart.

Yet such is the vanity of man, that we feel but little hesitation in deciding upon any action that comes before us. Alas! how blind are such decisions; how pernicious their results! What obloquy has been heaped upon innocence, what disgrace upon misfortune! How often has the shaft aimed at vice by an unskilful hand, pierced the unoffending breast of virtue! How feeble is human wisdom, when man is the subject of its investigation! The novelist dives into the heart to fathom its affections, and the physiognomist expects to find them depicted on the visage. The philosopher pretends to annalize the mind, and the gossip of a village professes to interpret the sneers and smiles of her neighbours. Experience, however, has shewn that the labors of these enquirers are but superficial; the surface of the mind alone is examined while its caverns and recesses remain unexplored and inaccessible to the eye of man. It has been ordained that they should proceed thus far and no farther, and like the adventurers in the Arctic regions, their fruitless endeavours to reach the "point proposed," only serve to render more certain the futility of the attempt.

At such men Daniel might snap his fingers; for he was not only "skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in all knowledge," and "ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers in the realm," but we learn in our text that he "had understanding in all visions and dreams." To him was given a portion of that attribute of the Deity, the power of seeing that "which no eye seeth" and which "it entereth not into the heart of man to conceive." Yet how different was the conduct of this great man, from that of the Pharisees of the present day. He imitated not those whip-poor-wills of religion who disturb the silence of wholesome meditation with their mournful dirges. He was not one of those babbling moralists that "hew out for themselves broken cisterns" He was content to do his duty, and no more. He had none of that impertinence which induces its possessor to judge of the motives of others. When called on to interpret the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, he modestly disclaims 'any wisdom of his own' and acknowledges that he speaks from inspiration. He then tells "the truth and nothing but the truth." In his address to the king he speaks like a wise man and a gentleman. He is independent, candid, and "by no means vulgar." He does not avail himself of the ascendancy which his knowledge gives him, to insult the ignorance of others; neither does he contrast his own piety with the irreligion of his Babylonish master. He is willing to fulfil his commission, but not anxious to exceed his instructions. He does not prate about things that do not concern him; nor does he dare to pry into the secrets of the heart, which the Omniscient eye alone can pierce. Let the men of the world imitate the modesty of Daniel.—Let them perform their own duty, and let them judge not lest they be judged.

Domestic Manufactures.

No. IV.

THERE is a spirit of intolerance, which, on whatever subject it is manifested, never fails to defeat its own designs, while it is repugnant to the feelings even of those by whom a great liberality of opinion is considered as a sin beyond forgiveness. Wherever it is displayed, reason is exerted in vain, argument loses all its influence, and opposition, however rational and mild, is the invariable signal for indiscriminate proscription. Whenever a favourite opinion is met by fair discussion, or a darling object combated by principles to which it bears a blind and implacable hatred only because they advocate a different object, the tocsin of alarm is sounded, in hopes of drowning in its peals the voice of persuasion or conviction. To prevent the interference of those who are so presumptuous as to attempt opposition to long cherished though probably dangerous ideas on subjects connected with the general welfare, bold and unqualified assertions, unsparing sweeping denunciations are too frequently substituted for the argument which is less within the power of the intellect that fails to employ it, or consistent with the disposition to which its ingenious character is so hostile. Is an attempt made to overthrow an object of idolatry? Those who desire ephemeral importance or pecuniary tribute from its votaries by fostering their prejudices, and supplying them with the decorations for their altars, lose sight of every other principle than that of self-interest, and become the busy trumpeters of unfounded alarm. As the most convincing argument which they can employ against those who are thus aiming at once at the destruction of the idol which they profess to worship, and the emolument which they derive from the rest of its worshippers, they exclaim, in all the fervor of dogmatical enthusiasm, "great is Diana of the Ephesians," and resign to the honest indignation of the people, the daring innovator, who, by his unanswerable logic, they have proved unworthy of mercy.

To such generous and able reasoners, it was not intended to submit the opinions proposed to be offered on a subject, which depends so much for its proper examination on candid argument, and patient research, as the one now under consideration. These opinions were adopted under an honest conviction, that in their practical application they were the best adapted to the real interests of this country of any that have been offered to the consideration of its citizens.—It was believed, and that too with a confidence which subsequent reflection has only served to strengthen, that all duties laid on foreign productions with a view to promote the interests of manufactures at home, will have an effect directly opposite. They will force labour and capital into channels which they should be suffered to wear for themselves. They will increase the number of producers without a commensurate increase of consumers; and they will even deprive the former of these of that support which they might derive from a source not so suddenly or so rapidly exhausted. They will produce a deterioration of manufactures as rapid as their short lived increase had been, and they will take from both the agriculturalists and the merchants, those resources which enable them to continue purchasers and consumers. Like the plants reared in forcing houses, manufactures might be made by their assistance to spring up rapidly for a short time, but they would be of a sickly and puny growth. Destitute of the natural soil and atmosphere in which they can alone flourish, they would never attain a healthy and vigorous size, and must ultimately perish through the over carefulness of those who had undertaken to nurture them.

Great reliance is placed by the friends of the general manufacturing system on the encouragement said to have been given by Edward third & Edward fourth, to the woolen manufacture of England, by prohibitions of foreign goods of the same description. But even admitting the efficacy of this measure, those who cite it, in their zeal for the cause in which they are engaged, lose sight of the particular circumstances which may prevent the formation or application of a rule in one country and period, which may be adopted with a probability of advantage in another country, and at a different time. There is no doubt, if any reliance can be placed on the truth of history, that Edward third did give an invitation to some Flemish manufacturers of woolens to remove to England, and that he adopted measures which he tho't would conduce to the general prosperity of his kingdom, while they promoted the immediate interests of a few of his subjects. But certainly it will admit of as little doubt, that these facts afford no satisfactory proof that a heavy tax imposed in any country on foreign manufactures, is the best or only way to render those at home beneficial and flourishing. It will be recollected that the question here is, whether it is practicable in the present situation of the United States to introduce into them a sudden and general system of manufacturing. To obtain a correct decision of this question, it will be necessary to keep in view the present circumstances in which they are placed with regard to the disparity between extent of soil and population, and their situation as respects capital. By comparing these with the state of England in the reigns of the 3d and 4th Edward it will be found, that there are no such features of resemblance between the two countries as will furnish the argument which they are supposed to afford.

But leaving entirely out of view this comparison, how are we warranted in placing the degree of confidence in the instances referred to, with which they are triumphantly invested? It is very certain, that any government may possess and exercise the power to compel its subjects to dispense with whatever foreign commodity it thinks proper to interdict, and it may oblige them should it be of essential importance, to pay such price for it at home as its domestic producers in consequence of that interdiction may choose to demand. In support of this fact, might with propriety be adduced the arbitrary edict of Edward 3d forbidding his subjects to wear any woollen cloth but such as was of domestic manufacture, and that of Charles 2d commanding that the dead should be buried alone in a dress of woollen. And here again it will be necessary to bear in mind, that the efficacy only of exorbitant duties (not of prohibition) to promote the permanent prosperity of manufactures is under consideration. Their policy as applicable to this country will be discussed hereafter.

ECONOMICUS.

NEWFOUNDLAND, May 27.

On Sunday last, the curiosity of the good people of this town, was gratified by an unexpected visit from one of the Red Indians—a native tribe, so called from the pigment of red earth with which they colour their bodies. The interesting stranger is a young woman, apparently about twenty; and she is only the second of her tribe that has been seen amongst the Anglo-American people on the island, for the last half century.

It a fact worth recording, however difficult it may be found of belief by our English brethren, that in Newfoundland, the most ancient of the British possessions in America, connected with the parent country by stronger ties of dependence than any other colony identified with her in population, & almost united by daily intercourse, that there should be at this day, a race of men, less known in Great Britain than any other people upon the surface of the globe. To what cause this extraordinary want of information is to be attributed, we shall not stop to enquire, but hasten to the more difficult task of calling the attention of the public, to the interesting subject which has thus unexpectedly presented itself. It is well known that the Red Indians are an aboriginal race of men, who were found along the coasts of the Island, at the time of its discovery by Europeans; but from the ill usage they received on all sides, they have long been compelled to retire into the interior, and to fly from the face of every animal in human form, as their certain & most deadly enemy.—In the north of the island, they are frequently visited by predatory parties of Esquimeaux from the Labrador, and murdered wherever they are met; in the south they are literally hunted like wild deer by the Micmacks, from the neighbouring provinces, and slain for the skins in which they are clothed and we may form a probable estimate of the treatment they have been used to experience, from our own people upon the sea shores, from the fact, that they fly at their approach with the utmost precipitation and horror, and the knowledge that until, very lately, it was not generally understood in this island, to be a punishable offence to shoot an Indian.

In consequence of this habitual persecution and cruelty, which every well informed person in this island knows are not exaggerated in the relation, we could not but believe that the Red Indians were the most ferocious and untractable of the savage tribe—impelled by no motives but those of hunger and hostility. And it is with no less astonishment than pleasure that we find, in the young woman who has been brought among us, a gentle being, sensibly alive to every mild impression and delicate propriety of her sex.—Quebec Gazette.

Messrs. Printers,

Having been educated at a period when it was considered respectable among men, as well as pleasing to God, to 'remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy;' and having for a considerable length of time, witnessed with great regret the increasing neglect of that sacred day; I was much gratified in incidentally looking over a late Salem paper, to find an advertisement giving public notice, that the select men of the town of Salem, "have directed the constables to patrole the streets every Sunday (till otherwise ordered) from 9 o'clock A. M. to 9 o'clock P. M. effectually to prevent the assembling of young men and boys at the corners of the streets and other places—their sea-bathing, and generally to preserve good order, and countearact the profane and improper way of passing the day. The names of all those who refuse to conform in any respect to the directions of the officers, are to be taken & a prosecution immediately commenced against them.' The above proceeding of the select men of the town of Salem, is certainly highly creditable to them, and must be productive of the best effect. I cannot help recommending their example as a very proper one, and expressing a wish at least, that it may be adopted by the select men of every town in the United States.—Con. Cour.

In the interesting work of Madame de Genlis, just published, a young painter is introduced, who, by favour of his art, gained access to Marat and Danton, during the reign of these monsters of iniquity.—He thus describes his feelings at the interview:—

"I could not enter to these monsters without shuddering: yet nothing around them bespoke their ferocity; their apartments were not furnished in the style of savage republicanism, but with epicurean, though depraved taste. It was curious to behold the blood thirsty horrid Danton arising from a perfumed bed, decorated with all the attributes of love: and the execrable Marat in a drawing room, ornamented with vases of allabaster filled with flowers, and little statues, representing Venus, the Graces, and the Muses. Nature had affixed a mark of reprobation upon the faces of these monsters. Robespierre and his accomplices were hedious; vulgarly, cunning, and cruelty formed the frightful expression of their countenances. I was so deeply struck with this expression that I drew the portraits of Danton and Mayton with a fidelity that froze with horror all who looked upon them. One morning, while in the chamber of Marat, his hideous aspect recalled so vividly to my mind the images of his crimes, that I nearly fainted. He observed me change colour, and questioned me, I said I had not broken my fast, which was not true; he ordered some wine and sandwiches to be given to me, which I was compelled to eat, to sustain the falsehood I had uttered.

WATERLOO TROPHIES.

A London paper of the 20th of June states that on Friday week a numerous and fashionable party attended at the late Museum in Piccadilly, to witness, the sale of the carriage and other things which belonged to Napoleon Bonaparte, which were captured at Waterloo. The articles were all eagerly bought up, and some of them at most extravagant prices. The following statement of the prices given for some of the things will serve to show in what estimation these relics are held:—The carriage sold for 168*l.* small opera glass, 5*l.* 5s. tooth brush, 3*l.* 13s. 6d. snuff box, 166*l.* 19s. 6d. military stock or collar, 1*l.* 17. old slippers, 1*l.* razor, (common) 4*l.* 4s. a piece of sponge, 17s. 6d. shaving box, 7*l.* 7s. pair of old gloves, 1*l.* old pocket handkerchief 1*l.* 11s. 6d. Many other articles sold equally high.—London pap.

HOME.

The pain which is felt when we are transplanted from our native soil—when the living branch is cut from the parent tree—is one of the most poignant which we have to endure through life. There are after griefs, which wound more deeply, which leave behind them sears never to be effaced, which bruise the spirit, and sometimes break the heart; but never do we feel so keenly the want of love, the necessity of being loved, and the sense of utter desertion, as when we first leave the haven of home, and are, as it were, pushed off upon the stream of life.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

FELLOW CITIZENS—As I have been placed before the public as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF at our next election, with my full approbation, I now state publicly that I have determined to stand the poll, and do hereby solicit your votes. The necessary attention to my business through these times of difficulty, has hitherto prevented me from making that personal declaration to you, which has become so usual on such occasions; yet I trust that as my whole life has been passed in this county, and as I once had the honor of serving you in the Sheriff's Office, sufficient information as to my qualifications may be easily acquired. If the citizens of Allegheny county should favor me with their voice on the day of election, I shall remember with gratitude this mark of public confidence.

WM. M'CANDLESS.

July 16.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

Fellow Citizens,

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated assertions of some that I had declined standing the pole altogether; and of others that I had suffered my name to be mentioned merely for the purpose of promoting the election of a favorite candidate; I now candidly and honestly assure you that I mean to be one of the disinterested twelve who have solicited your votes. In short, it would be no small gratification to me to be your next sheriff. I, in the mean time, fully conceived that you will exercise your judgement on the occasion, remain whether successful or unsuccessful

Your Fellow Citizen,

WILLIAM LECKY.

Pittsburgh, July 16.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

FELLOW CITIZENS—My name has appeared amongst a number of others in the public prints of this place, as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF, at the next election, and as I have been well assured that when I was spoken of at a political meeting lately held, it was publicly stated that I had declined standing a poll for that office, I think it right to mention that I did not offer myself at first, neither did I ever say or hint to any person that I intended to decline. The compliment of having been mentioned by my fellow citizens in that way, is too flattering to be lightly treated—But as it is the privilege of every citizen to exercise his own judgement on the day of election, I should think solicitation would be rather offensive than pleasing, and will therefore only observe, that I feel grateful for being put in nomination, and shall be highly so if successful.

I am yours very respectfully,

JAMES B. OLIVER.

Pittsburgh, July 23.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

Friends and Fellow Citizens —

FOR the first time in my life I appear before you as a candidate for office, should you deem me capable and worthy of your confidence I solicit your suffrages at the ensuing election for the office of SHERIFF, for Allegheny county; pledging myself, should I be elected, to discharge the duties of the office with impartiality.

WM. B. FOSTER.

Pitt township, August 13.

To the Electors of Allegheny county.

AS I have been placed before the public as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF at our next election, with my full approbation, and as I have been given in some parts of the county that I had given up the idea of standing a poll, I consider it a duty I owe myself to state to the publicly, that I have not declined. The duties of a very confining business have prevented me from making that personal declaration to my fellow citizens, which has become usual on such occasions, yet I trust, that as my whole life has been passed in this county, sufficient information as to my qualifications or unfitness for the office may be easily acquired by any individual who may think fit to make the enquiry. If the citizens of Allegheny shall think proper to favor me with their voice on the day of election, I shall feel highly gratified, for more reasons than one; if another of the candidates be preferred to me, I shall acquiesce without a murmur, conceiving that every member of our society ought to exercise independently, the full right of suffrage.

Your humble servt.

MORGAN NEVILL.

I am, gentlemen, your obedt.

PITTSBURGH.

Tuesday, August 31, 1819.

The following article from the 'Downingstown Republican,' is inserted in the last Statesman, as applicable (says the Editor of that paper) to this neighbourhood.

"There are a great many kind hearted and liberal souls among the federal party, and we are almost of opinion the editor of the Record [Gazette] is one of them, who cannot bear this thing of party—and would gladly unite to put down this hydra monster, and heartily join in supporting one joint ticket—provided that ticket contained "a greater proportion of men of talents"—and "provided also," that those men should all be federalists!"

Yes! Mr. Pentland, we do avow ourselves of the number of those 'liberal souls' who wish to do away 'this thing of party.' We have nothing of the Sempronius spirit about us; we can sincerely exclaim with Lucius,

"Our minds, we must confess, are turned on peace."

Since the commencement of our editorial career we have devoted all our attention to the task of attempting to stimulate our fellow citizens to the physical aggrandizement of our western country; we are willing that judgment shall be passed on our conduct even by those who may think fit to array themselves in the ranks of our enemies. No! however profitable the Editor of the Statesman has found it, and may still find it, to keep up the spirit of mere party, we have done with it; indeed, if our bosoms were so constituted as to render political acrimony agreeable to us, we could find nothing as a foundation for such a feeling. Our general government has come round in a great measure to those principles of Washington and Hamilton for which we have always been contending; and if they would give a little more attention to internal improvement and manufactures, (these certainly not party questions) we should be perfectly contented. As to our state government, although we are by no means satisfied with it, yet our objections are not political ones. We are dissatified with the niggardly policy, or dastardly cowardice which prevents it from doing those things which would place our state beyond the competition of all our neighbours; but as to party spirit we have nothing to fear from its being cherished in Pittsburgh, and nothing to hope from its being put down. There is one thing, however, which, from motives of brotherly friendship, we must inform the Editor of the Statesman of, in order that he may trim his sails accordingly, and this is, that party spirit has gone down, and the delegation system is held in abhorrence by three-fourths of the county of Allegheny of all political denominations.

The last part of his extract is partly true and partly false; as to our wishing to have 'men of talents' on the ticket we plead guilty to the charge; heinous as is the offence in the eye of the 'Statesman,' candour will not permit us to deny it; but as for desiring or attempting to have a ticket entirely of federalists, it is as false as it is absurd. Did we not support Samuel Douglas at two elections, and send him to the assembly by an immense majority? Was not William Marks taken up by us at the last election? Did not Henry Baldwin and Walter Forward receive our voices? Did not a great proportion of the federal party vote for Mr. Findlay? And finally, on the ticket recommended from Pittsburgh for the assembly, are there not two republicans, John Gilmore and Garrett Wall? No! No! Mr. Editor, the delusion is nearly over; some people will shortly be convinced that the 'country folks' will not agree to be bamboozled any longer; our yeomenry are beginning to cry out for able and useful men to represent us, and we are truly happy to find such unanimity in favour of William Wilkins, who will really be a useful man for our city and country.

RUMOR OF WAR.

The Franklin Gazette of yesterday, says—'We understand, from credible authority, that orders have been issued to the navy department, to double the number of workmen engaged in various ports in building ships of the line, for the purpose of hastening the completion of these vessels.' If this information is correct, the course of these orders may no doubt be traced to the delay on the part of the King of Spain in ratifying the late treaty.

In Philadelphia, yesterday, a Gold Medal, commemorative of the naval victory on lake Erie, was presented, in the name of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, to Captain Elliott. A similar medal is prepared for Commodore Perry. His absence in the public service has so long delayed its presentation.

The undertakers of the Schuylkill Navigation, at and near Norristown, are making considerable progress in their undertaking. The dam which is to be erected opposite the town, eight or nine hundred feet in length across the river, and seven feet high, has been commenced, and the canal and locks on the western side of the river, are in a fair way of soon being completed.—Nor. Her.

The Boons'-lick Resolutions.—The assemblage of citizens who adopted these resolutions, amounted to several hundred, and in point of character and intelligence would be equal to any equal number which could assemble on the continent. Four years ago the place of their assemblage was a little better than a wilderness; only a few frontier settlers there, shut up in forts, and with their rifles maintaining their ground against thousands of hostile Indians. What a change to see two or three hundred energetic men assembled there in 1819 to celebrate the anniversary of American independence, and to assert their own rights!

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

Extract of a letter from St. Thomas, dated 4th August, to a gentleman in this city, arrived last evening.

"You must know that Barcelona has fallen, and Cumana and the whole Royal squadron, are now in the possession of the Patriots, and probably before this reaches you, Laguira, Porto Cavello and Caracas will also be subject to the rebels."

MISSOURI TERRITORY.

'A meeting has been called at Franklin, (Missouri) to agree on building a Market House, and establishing a Market, that it may no longer be necessary for the carts from the country to be driven round the city, to each inhabitant!'

Look at this!—How wonderful, how almost surpassing belief are the facts, that the Franklin city, alluded to in the foregoing paragraph, was, five or six years ago, a wilderness: it is situated four hundred miles above St. Louis, on the Missouri, that so recent is its settlement, it is not even yet laid down on our maps; and that the spot, called Boon's Lick, to which Col. Boon retired but a few years since, as remote from civilization, where he might enjoy his hunting with the sons of the forest, unmolested by the white man, now a flourishing city in which more than a thousand inhabitants are enjoying all the comforts and elegancies of civilized life, and a seaport, where the mariner and merchant pursue their respective and connected occupations! Truly may it be said that there are no bounds to American enterprize: that unconquerable steam, has triumphed over distance, and is uniting the most remote parts of our vast empire in friendly intercourse.

Prov. Patriot.

THE EAGLE.

The beautiful description and character of the American Eagle, given below, is from the pedestrious tour of Estwick Evans, Esq.

"Whilst in the Missouri Territory, & not far from the banks of the river, a bald Eagle perched upon a tall blasted oak, attracted my attention. It was in the forenoon, and he viewed the sun with an unblinked eye. Whilst I was admiring the strength of his form, and the majesty of his aspect, a wild turkey flew from a neighbouring tree, and alighted on the ground. The eagle pounced upon his prey; but ere he could effect his object, the turkey was shot. I might too, have killed the Eagle, but admiration and awe, prevented me.—I felt he was the emblem, and the inspiration of my country; and at that moment, I would not, for ten thousand worlds like ours, have cut a feather of his wing. There is something wonderfully impressive, in the nature of this bird; and it is not surprising that the Romans were devoted to it. When quite a lad, I mortally wounded an eagle, supposing it to be a hawk. It was a half hour before it died, and during this time, my heart was filled with mingled emotions of regret and awe. I felt as though I were witnessing the last moments of some meritorious hero, who had fallen upon the hills of his fame. This noble bird fixed his eyes upon, and without a single blink, supported the pangs of death, with all the grandeur of fortitude. I could not endure his aspect—I shrunk into my own insignificance, and have ever since been sensible of my inferiority.

The hull of a boat, entirely of malleable iron, and intended to be fitted up in an elegant style, to ply as a passage boat on the Forth and Clyde canal, was lately launched from the Bank of the Monkland canal, at Faskine, and named the Vulcan. The length of the boat is 63 feet, the width 12 1-2 feet, weighs only 12 tons 15 cwt. and draws no more than 21 inches of water. This is the first iron boat built in Scotland.

RURAL SKETCH.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman on a tour through the eastern states, published in the Boston Centinel.

"We ought not to omit the remark, that no class of people appear more happy at their labor, or more contented with their lot than the cultivators of the soil: and that they look beyond the clouds for the source of the rain which fructifies their fields, and below the farrow for the Great Spring of vegetation. In passing through any part of New England.

"Where Freeborn thousands their own fields possess,
Where tyrants awe not, and no Lords oppress.', the traveller will every where see willing hands and cheerful hearts cultivating a "sometimes hard, but still a generous soil"—and in the groupe, will find ministers and people, magistrates and yeomen, generals and privates, all engaged in the same field—where no whips are used to compel exertion; but where toil is reciprocally shared, and where

"Landlords and workmen each familiar greet,
Share the same bowl, nor tastes distinguished meat."

We were involuntarily led into this digression, by the recollection of the many hundreds of hay-makers we saw scattered over the extensive meadows which border the Connecticut; and among whom we recognized many legislators and generals. It was about noon when we passed the Hadley meadows, and the hay makers were collecting in groups, under trees and waggons, and hay-stacks, to take dinner, with appetites which the sons and daughters of luxury and indolence would give worlds to possess. The rich interval lands on the Deerfield and Connecticut rivers are celebrated for their fertility, and it is well known to history, that the aboriginals of the soil fought with more fury to retain them than any other parts of their great patrimony.—They are worth fighting for.

At a very fine inn at Northampton we noticed a glaced case, in which were deposited many articles of finely worked muslin, and other household manufactures, and on inquiry was informed that they were placed there for sale by a Society of young ladies, of which the daughter of the late worthy Governor of Massachusetts was the directress, who met weekly to produce them; and that their avails are sacredly appropriated to the education of pious and indigent young men, to qualify them to become Missionaries. It was gratifying to travellers to be thus able to contribute their mite to such a pious and praise worthy object; and we learnt with satisfaction, that those from Boston are among the largest purchasers of the articles thus consecrated to promote the salvation of souls. They are pronounced by judges to be excellent samples of needle work."

REASONS FOR PREFERRING A THIN WOMAN.

Mr. ——Fell in love with a remarkable thin woman. On his being asked by his friends, the reason of his choice, he made answer—'It was to ease the fatigue of courtship, as the avenue to her heart must be so much nearer than of one more plump.'

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

From the New York Com. Advertiser, Aug. 19.

By the arrival last evening of the ship Hercules, captain Cobb, in 46 days from Liverpool, we have London dates to the 29th of June, and Liverpool to the 1st of July, both inclusive.

Very severe eruptions of Mount Etna and Mount Vesuvius took place early in June. The lava from the former threatened to overwhelm the town of Catalonia, and that from the latter took a direction towards the ancient city of Pompeii.

A proposition is before the French Chamber of Deputies, to form Commercial relations with the Independents of South America, and to open the negociation of a treaty with the government of Hayti. The speech of M. Manuel, who moved and advocated these measures, was ordered to be printed.

On the 28th of June, Mr. Wilberforce moved in the House of Commons, that 60001. sterling be granted to his Majesty for Gen. Boyd. Mr. W. stated that 'gen. Boyd was a native of the U. States, had in early life rendered a great service to the cause of Great Britain in the East Indies, at a very critical period of affairs there. He was at that time commander of a corps in the service of the Nizam.—After some debate the motion was carried.'

The following note from Captain Coffin, was received by Capt. Cobb a day or two before he left Liverpool:

Friend Cobb—Please to report the arrival of the Telegraph, at the N. E. Buoy on the 26th June, in 24 days, without reefing since leaving port. Jacob Perkins, Esq. made during the calm weather, many experiments with his instruments to prove the compressibility of water by the same element, which fact was established by immersion of the machine from 600 to 3600 feet below the surface of the sea.—His Baythometer is a perfect sounding instrument, and is as true in a 10 knot breeze as a calm—indicating every fathom the machine is under the surface of the sea. Yours, very truly.

H. COFFIN.

The Emperor Alexander.

We find the following article in the London Morning Chronicle of 12th June:

"The report that the Emperor Alexander is assembling an immense body of troops in the vicinity of St. Petersburg, gains ground, and gives rise to serious alarm. It is said to be for the mere purpose of a Grand Review, and that he has invited the duke of Wellington to be present at it—but it cannot be believed, that for the mere object of a holiday parade, he would, in the present state of his finances, incur the expense of marching his numerous armies from their distant quarters, and therefore, it breeds a suspicion that the rumors respecting his design on Sweden, are not unfounded.
